

ESI 2015 « - 10 » & showtime!

Brussels, 11th July 2015. Only 10 days remaining before the opening of the Expo-Sciences International 2015, Brussels edition, which is already the must-attend event of this summer for the general public!

1,000 young people between 10 and 25, 400 projects, 5 continents, all religions... all gathered in one place around science, technology and discovery... That's right! All this will happen this year!

The Jeunesses Scientifiques de Belgique and MILSET have team up to host the event and are looking forward to welcome you from 20th to 23rd July, free entry. ESI is a positive, fun and educational event for everyone. The stunning Tour & Taxis site in Brussels, particularly its sheds, will house the discoveries and inventions of the world during this period.

This event has numerous objectives: to promote the efforts of the young people, teachers, leaders and organisations active in the promotion of science; underline the essential nature of research, science and innovation; build relationships with other institutions with similar objectives; promote the exchange of knowledge between young and old; encourage scientific culture in a multicultural environment; and many more...

ESI 2015 can also count with, on our national Day, Tuesday 21st July, the presence of world-renowned scientist, Professor and Nobel Prize Laureate: François Englert whom will inspire us with an exclusive conference. Other events, conferences, networking activities will be showcased this week with different themes such as energy, digital technology, but also on how to motivate the young people to choose for scientific studies.

In these times of populism, of isolationism or "finger pointing" to the cultural and other differences, Brussels will host this event with an emphasis on cooperation, exchange, solidarity and universality. A snub to fundamentalism, especially among young people, future main actors of our life.
